Delegation is not losing control. It is building capacity.

If your day is filled with repeatable tasks, constant follow-ups, and work that keeps the business running but does not require your unique judgment, you already have work that can be delegated.

Use this workbook in three passes

1

CHECK

Mark every task you currently handle or need done.

2

CHOOSE

Circle the tasks that are repetitive, teachable, or time-consuming.

3

TRANSFER

Start with 3–5 tasks, document the outcome, and hand them off with clear expectations.

THE DELEGATION TEST A task is a strong delegation candidate when it is repeatable, documented, measurable, and does not require your final authority. Keep strategy, sensitive decisions, and relationship-critical conversations with the right leader.
